

Are urinary tract infections associated with an increased risk of relapses? Of a transitory aggravation of disability? Of prolonged aggravation of disability?

- ✓ Urinary tract infections are not associated with an increased risk of relapse in patients with multiple sclerosis (Level C)
- ✓ Non-febrile urinary tract infections are not associated with an increased risk of transient worsening disability in patients with multiple sclerosis (expert recommendation)
- ✓ Febrile-urinary tract infections are associated with an increased risk of transient worsening disability of patients with multiple sclerosis (expert recommendation)
- ✓ Urinary tract infections are not associated with an increased risk of prolonged disability aggravation in patients with multiple sclerosis (Level C)